"Fortes In Fide"

"Fortes In Fides" is the Latin phrase for "Strong in Faith" Just like the US Army wants you to be "All that you can be - Army Strong," and the US Marines are "looking for a few good men," the Church also has its rallying cries, like "Fortes In Fides."

The traditional way of looking at the Church is to see (a) the "Church Triumphant," or those who are in Heaven, (b) the "Church Suffering," or those who are in Purgatory, and © the "Church Militant," which is all of us here on earth. Just this past weekend at a picnic, someone wondered if they were validly confirmed because they were not slapped on the cheek (they are). Because the sacrament of Confirmation was seen as making us "soldiers of Christ," the bishop would lightly slap (really tap) the person being confirmed on the cheek, and a reminder that they were to be "Fortes in Fides" - Strong in Faith. While the slap no longer part of the Confirmation Ritual, all of us are still suppose to be Strong in Faith.

Earlier this year, I read a book by Fr. Richard Heilman, "Church Militant Field Manual: Special Forces Training for the Life in Christ," which takes up this theme of how can we prepare ourselves to be soldiers of Christ. For those who might not like such a military view of being a follower of Christ, such language has a very long history in the Church. Jesus says, right before His Ascension, "You will receive power when the Holy Spirit comes upon you and you will be My witnesses" (Acts 1:8). Building on this command of the Lord, St. Paul wrote, "Finally, be strong in the Lord and in Him mighty power. Put on the full armor of God, so that you can take your stand against the devil's schemes. For our struggle is not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the authorities, against the powers of this dark world and against the spiritual forces of evil in the heavenly realms" (Ephesians 6:10-12).

So, I am not calling for a new crusade to take up rifles, guns, or even swords to fight ISIS or any other group. Rather, we must recognize the spiritual warfare that is going on, and take up the spiritual weapons to fight for freedom - the freedom that Christ Jesus won for us. The greatest evil that we are facing in our times is the tsunami of secularism which argues that "god is dead," or at the very least that God does not matter. However, we would be foolish if we cling to the belief that we can defeat these spiritual forces of evil relying only on our own power.

St. Peter implored us to be fortes in fide, strong in faith, because the devil is prowling like a lion, looking for someone to devour (1 Peter 5:8-9). When a lion hunts, it first sizes up the herd, and then isolates the weakest and easiest target. When we detach ourselves from God and His supernatural gifts of grace, we become powerless to defend ourselves from the devil.

We are being summoned to allow God's powerful, supernatural graces to surge through us to a waiting world. Our Catholic ancestors could not imagine going as much as a day without "being in a state of grace." They understood that, without grace, they were vulnerable to every whim of the devil, and powerless to assist those who had lost their way.

Recognizing these ancestors, these warrior saints who went before us as the heroes of our faith, Fr. Heilman encourages us to study their ways of becoming "Fortes in Fides" - Strong in Faith. Drawing from Fr. Heilman's book, over the next couple of weeks, I am going to share some of what these heroes of faith can teach us about spiritual discipline and the vital daily regimen of prayer.
