From Fr. JC Maximilian's Desk "Christ's Temptation: A Model for Us"

A few years ago I discovered a wonderful spiritual writer, Blessed Columba Marmion, who has been acclaimed by nearly every pope in the 20th century. Pope Benedict XV used to keep a copy of Marmion's classic, Christ The Life of the Soul, on his bedside and recommended it by saying, "Read this, it is the pure doctrine of the Church." Who am I to argue with a Pope; so I thought that I would share some of Blessed Marmion's reflections for the Sundays of Lent.

In this weekend's Gospel we hear the account of Jesus' temptations in the desert. In order to understand this mystery of the Faith, Blessed Marmion tells us that we must always keep in mind that Jesus through His Incarnation and Birth became like us in all things except sin.

Think about last Wednesday - Ash Wednesday - when most of us were expected to fast; only having one meal, and two light snacks. How did we feel after that rather modest fast? Hungry? Perhaps a bit irritable? Maybe we were even feeling a little weak.

Now imagine what Jesus felt like after fasting for 40 days. His was not the light fast that we experienced of only one meal and two snacks. For Jesus it was 40 days of NO FOOD AT ALL. According to medical experts, that is about the limit that the human body can go without food. Jesus did not work a miracle to prevent Himself from experiencing the effects of this fast. He must have been in terribly weak. It is at this moment that the Devil tries to press his advantage to tempt Jesus.

Now I will let Blessed Marmion, the spiritual master, speak:

"If Christ, the Incarnate Word, the Son of God, willed to enter into combat with the evil spirit, shall we be astonished if the members of His Mystical Body must follow the same path?"

"Do not let us be surprised at temptation: never let us forget that Christ, our Model in all things, was tempted before us, and not only tempted, but touched by the spirit of darkness."

"Above all, do not let us forget that it was not only as the Son of God that Jesus overcame the devil, but likewise as Head of the Church; in Him and by Him, we have triumphed and we triumph still over the suggestions of the rebel spirit"

(Columba Marmion, Christ in His Mysteries, pp. 186-190. As quoted in D. Columba Marmion, Words of Life: On the Margins of the Missal, edited by Dom Thibaut, OSB and translated by Mother M. St. Thomas).

Reflect on the Word of Jesus Christ

March 5, 2017

1st Sunday of Lent

Matthew 4: 1-11

PRAY that God will not let you be led into temptation

Have you ever been tempted to sin? Everyone can answer "yes" to that question, even Jesus! Jesus had taken on all the attributes of being human, so even he experienced temptation. The difference between Jesus and us is...that sometimes ...we give into temptation and sin. Jesus never did. He resisted the urge to sin because he relied on God to help him and trusted that God would!

In the Gospel, when the devil tempts Jesus, Jesus always answers with some words from Scripture. Jesus must have been very familiar with God's written Word.

How do we keep from being tempted. One way is to listen to the readings on Sunday!! Take it upon your self to read the Bible. Yes, Catholic's are supposed to read the Bible!

One of the goals of Lent is to undergo a change of heart, to be sorry for our sins and try to become more like Jesus. To do that, we must overcome the temptation to sin. Jesus is our model, when we see how Jesus refused to sin it gives us courage to do the same thing!

Adult: God, help me to fast, say extra prayers and give alms. Help me to go the extra mile and do more during this Holy Season of Lent. I know, in my heart that obedience, to you God, will lead to eternal life.

Child: Jesus, I ask that the Holy Spirit help me this Lent, like he helped you in the desert.

Fast, Pray, and Give Alms

THE CRYING ROOM

I was at Mass surrounded by five other friends, all of us "older moms" with kids in school, able to sit in peace. Midway through, a woman walked in, and stood at the back. She was wrangling two very small children while balancing a very large diaper bag on her already burdened shoulder. As a once-younger mama who would attempt daily Mass with an active young one, I understood her. When a mom brings small children to Mass alone, she needs to be there.

And her children ran up and down the aisle. They walked out of the church. They dangerously played with opening and closing doors. They did not let their mama sit. She ran. She followed. She protected.

I wondered if she looked at us: older moms, hair brushed, outfits coordinated, tiny purses, no small kids to chase, light loads. Because I used to do that. I used to see them...the moms who looked so free. The moms who were so put together. The moms who could sit and enjoy and be fed. And I wondered . . . would that ever be me?

And the great irony? It will never be me. And it was not any of us sitting there that morning at Mass. We may no longer carry visible bags that weigh us down, but trust me, we carry them. Because a small running child grows up into a big running child.

As moms, we really never stop chasing, running after, steering them from danger. We may get to sit, and we may appear to be alone, but that child? The one we used to swaddle, and nurse, and rock to sleep? That child is still right there. And we carry them still. We carry their growing pains, their frustrations, their anxieties. We worry if they are drinking, abusing drugs, hanging with the wrong crowd. We mourn their lukewarm faith, their lack of empathy, their self-centeredness. We fear this is not just a stage. We fear they may run, and we never catch up.

This morning I saw her again. The young mom. Her name? Mary.

And instead of taking my usual seat (because we Catholics do that-we love to sit in the same spot week after week, don't we?) I sat with Mary. In the crying room. Her toddler put rosary bead after rosary bead around his neck, while she shared how hard the days can be. I nodded, and looked her in the eyes. and said, "I totally get it. My kids are grown now, but trust me, this mom gig? It is still hard."

She looked at me with a smile and said, "You do so much, you have such faith, and you are always so together . . . I would never think you would have any doubts or hard days."

You know, we need to do this. We need to be honest. We need to be real. We need to share our hearts. Really share them. The entire heart. Not the cleaned-up, acceptable version, but the real deal. The filth and the shame and the honest truth. We need to stop comparing and begin sharing.

And we all need to take a moment, and sit with Mary in the crying room.
